Larry, when I saw notice of Billie's death, I immediately called Joe and he had already spoken with you. He was sad about the passing of such a "wonderful human being," explaining that she had been ill the last few years. I remember her well and we had a small celebration of her life and your lives together. Then, of course, that led to a trip down memory lane which included your incredible friendship. Since the complications after his surgery, he is home bound except for trips to the doc. I understand you are doing very well and keeping extraordinarily active in the music biz. Although years have passed since we last saw each other, I recall all the details as if they occurred just yesterday. Husband Joe joins me in sending you our heartfelt condolences.
